NATIONAL PREVENTION AND RESPONSE PLAN ON VIOLENCE AGAINST CHILDREN 2019 — 2023

BRIEF

Governance, Justice, Law and Order Sector

This policy brief is the fourth in a series for the National Prevention and Response Plan on Violence against Children 2019-2023 (NPRP on VAC). The brief focuses on the Governance, Justice, Law and Order Sector. It includes some of the most relevant findings from the 2019 VAC survey for the sector and strategic actions that the sector has committed to addressing violence against children in NPRP on VAC.

RELEVANT FINDINGS FROM THE 2019 VAC SURVEY*

The findings below expressly point to critical insights required by law enforcement officers and judiciaries when dealing with both children in conflict with law and child survivors of violence. Many children that the governance, justice, and law and order sector comes into contact with might have been victims of violence themselves in the past.

A higher proportion of males ages 13-17 who experienced physical violence in the past 12 months (17.1%) perpetrated physical violence compared to males who did not experience physical violence in the past 12 months (6.8%).

One of the VAC Survey findings concludes that children and youth are at higher risk of further victimization or perpetration if they are survivors or witnesses of violence. In addition, children who experienced violence are at a higher risk of perpetrating violence themselves. Equally, youth witnesses to violence in childhood are at a higher risk of becoming perpetrators in young adulthood, carrying forward the impact of violence they experienced in childhood to their relationships. Finally, witnessing violence at home in childhood is also significantly associated with childhood and young adulthood victimization.

Perpetration: A higher proportion of males ages 13-17 who experienced physical violence in the past 12 months (17.1%) perpetrated physical violence compared to males who did not experience physical violence in the past 12 months (6.8%). Similarly, a higher proportion of females aged 13-17 who experienced physical violence in the past 12 months (19.1%) perpetrated physical violence compared to females who did not experience physical violence in the past 12 months (7.8%).

✓ A higher proportion of males ages 18-24 who experienced childhood physical violence perpetrated physical violence (17.5%) compared to males who did not experience childhood physical violence (8.9%), the difference is not statistically significant. A higher proportion of females ages physical violence in the past 12 months (19.1%) perpetrated physical violence compared to females who did not experience physical violence in the past 12 months (7.8%).

18-24 who experienced childhood physical violence also perpetrated physical violence (12.5%) compared to females who did not experience childhood physical violence (5.0%).

CHILDREN' VIEWS ON HOW TO PREVENT AND RESPOND TO VIOLENCE

Children have the right to be heard and have their views given due weight in line with their maturity and evolving capacities in matters affecting their lives. Therefore, while the 2019 VAC Survey revealed children's experiences of violence, it was also important and necessary to consult children themselves on what they consider as the main cause of violence against children and possible approaches to prevention and response. Accordingly, the Department of Children Services carried out 28 group discussions with 418 children (267 girls and 151 boys) aged 10 to 17 years in 28 counties. Through its County Children Coordinators, the discussions explored children's perspectives on the causes of different forms of violence (physical, sexual and emotional) in specific settings (at home, school, and other places) and possible ways to prevent and respond to violence against children.

Below is a list of what children shared regarding possible causes, prevention, and response measures of physical violence in all settings relevant to stakeholders in the governance, justice, and law and order sectors.
